

What the 2019-20 NCI® Adult Family Survey data tells us about

Case Management and Staff Support across NCI States

NATIONAL CORE INDICATORS®
NASDDDS & HSRI

This report tells us about:

- What NCI tells us about case management and staff support
- Why this is important
- Where to find out more about access to services and supports in across NCI States

What is NCI?

Each year, NCI asks people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) and their families how they feel about their lives and the services they get. NCI uses surveys so that the same questions can be asked to people in all NCI states.

Who answered questions to this survey?

Questions for this survey are answered by a person who lives in the same house as an adult who is getting services from the state. Most of the time, a parent answers these questions. Sometimes a sibling or someone who lives with the person and knows them well answers these questions.

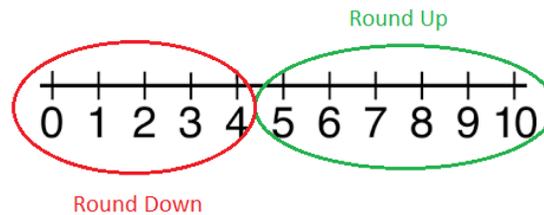

How are data shown in this report?

NCI asks questions about planning services and supports for people who get services from the state. In this report we see how family members of people getting services answered questions about case management and support staff.

- In this report, when we say “you” we mean the person who is answering the question (most of the time, a parent).
- In this report, when we say “family member” we mean the person who is getting services from the state.

We use words and figures to show the number of yes and no answers we got. Some of our survey questions have more than a yes or no answer. They ask people to pick: “always,” “usually,” “sometimes,” or “seldom/never.” For this report, we count all “always” answers as yes. All others we count as no.

We round percentages to the nearest ten percent. To round, we look at the last digit in a number. If the digit is 5 or more, we “round up” to the next highest number with a zero. If the digit is 4 or less, we “round down” to the next lowest number with a zero.

For example:

If 87% of people say services and supports always change when needs change, we “round up” to 90%.

If 12% of people say they get the supports and services their family needs, we “round down” to 10%.

This report can help people talk about services and supports. If you want more information, you can look up the full report at:

<https://www.nationalcoreindicators.org>

Making Connections -- Why Is This Important?

Many adults with IDD who get services and supports live with their families. NCI data tell us that across states 39% of people with IDD live their family. That's 2 out of every 5 people. In some states even more people live with their family. It is important to know if families believe their family member is getting needed support from staff and their case managers and whether the individual and/or the family can get in contact with staff and the case manager when they need to. Families also respond to questions about whether they can change their staff and case manager if they are not satisfied. This information can be shared with state officials (like a governor or mayor) in order to inform policy making and quality improvement.

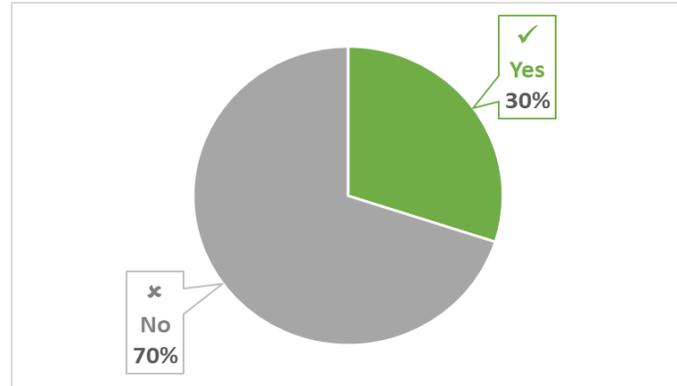

Choice

Sometimes families can make choices about the people who help them. NCI asks if families can make choices about the people who are paid to help their family member with a disability.

Reminder:

- When we say “you” we mean the person who is answering the question (most of the time, a parent).
- When we say “family member” we mean the person who is getting services from the state.

Did your family choose your family member's case manager/service coordinator?

NCI tells us 3 out of every 10 people said their family chose their family member's case manager.

Can your family always choose or change the agency that provides your family member's services?

NCI tells us 6 out of every 10 people said their family can always choose or change the agency that provides their family member's services.

Can your family always choose or change your family member's support workers?

NCI tells us 6 out of every 10 people said their family can always choose or change their family member's support workers.

Does your family directly manage support staff? For example, does someone in your family hire support staff or schedule when they work with your family member.

NCI tells us 5 out of every 10 people said their family directly manages support staff.

Case Managers/Service Coordinators and Support Workers

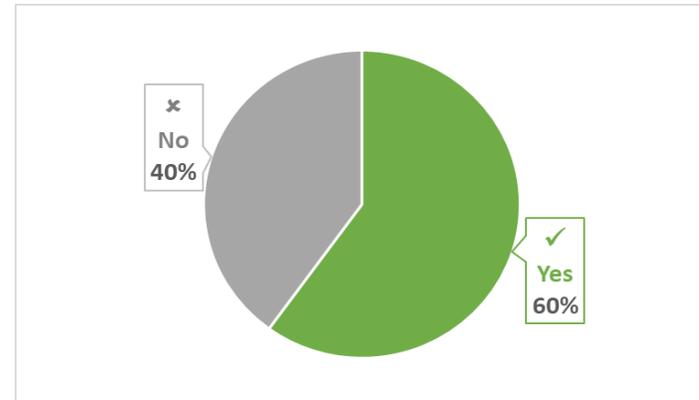

There may be many people who help families and family members who get services from the state. Case Managers/Service Coordinators work closely with families to help families decide, organize and get the services they need. Support workers are paid to help at home, work and day program.

Reminder:

- When we say “you” we mean the person who is answering the question (most of the time, a parent).
- When we say “family member” we mean the person who is getting services from the state.

Are you or your family member always able to contact the case manager/service coordinator when you want?

NCI tells us 6 out of every 10 people said they are always able to contact the case manager/service coordinator when they want.

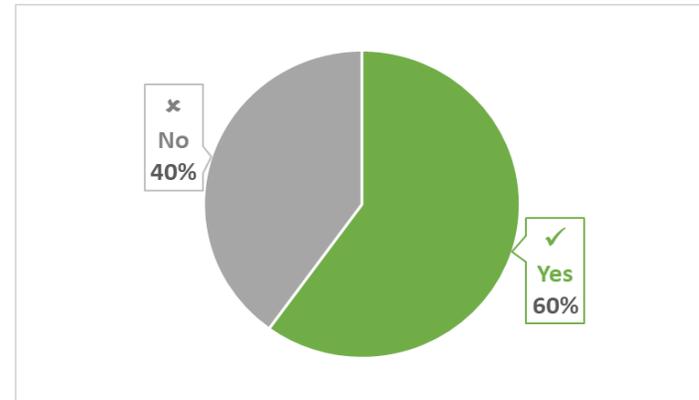

Does the case manager/service coordinator always respect your family's choices and opinions?

NCI tells us 7 out of every 10 people said the case manager/service coordinator always respects their family's choices and opinions.

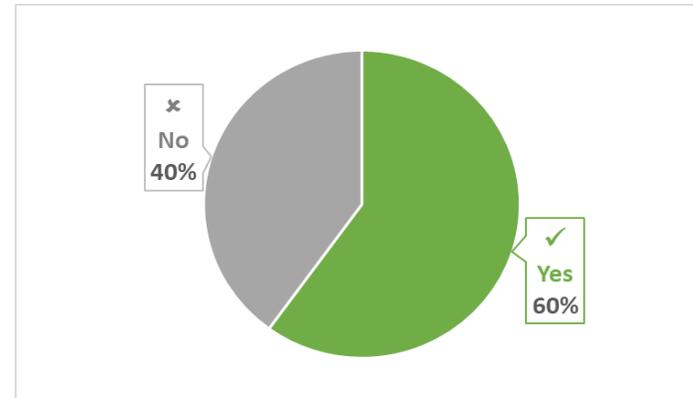

Are you or your family member always able to contact his/her support workers when you want?

NCI tells us 6 out of every 10 people said they are always able to contact support workers when they want.

Do support workers always come and go when they are supposed to?

NCI tells us 6 out of every 10 people said support workers always come and go when they are supposed to.

Do support workers always speak to you in a way you understand?

NCI tells us 8 out of every 10 people said support workers always speak to them in a way they understand.

If your family member does not communicate verbally, are there always support workers who can communicate with him/her?

NCI tells us 3 out of every 10 people whose family member does not communicate verbally said there are always support workers who can communicate with him/her.

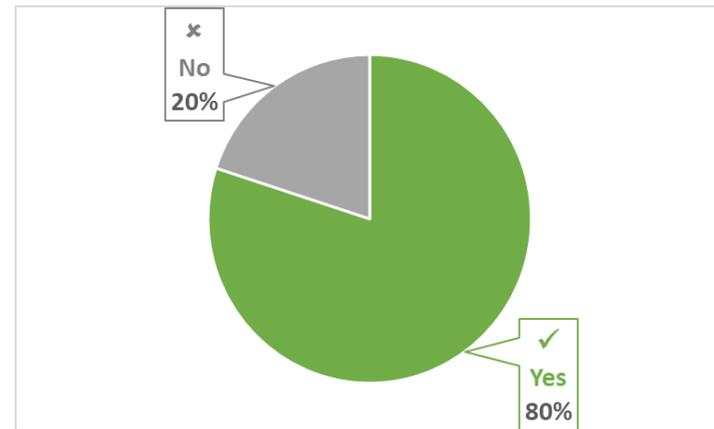

Do support workers always have the right information and skills to meet your family's needs?

NCI tells us 5 out of every 10 people said support workers always have the right information and skills to meet their family's needs.

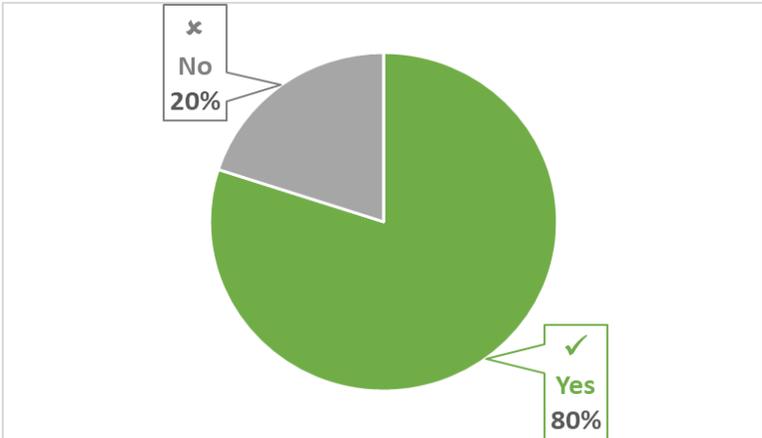

Do service providers for your family member work together to provide support? For example, does the agency providing transportation work together with the day program?

NCI tells us 8 out of every 10 people said providers work together to provide support.

Are services always delivered in a way that is respectful of your family's culture?

NCI tells us 8 out of every 10 people said services are always delivered in a way that is respectful of their family's culture.

What Did Family of People With Disabilities across NCI States Say?

30% They or their family member choose their family member's case manager/service coordinator

60% Family always choose or change the agency that provides their family member's services

60% Family always choose or change their family member's support workers

50% Families directly manage support staff

60% They or their family member are always able to contact the case manager/service coordinator when they want

70% The case manager/service coordinator always respect their family's choices and opinions

60% They or their family member are always able to contact support workers when they want

60% Support workers always show up to work on time and leave when they should

80% Support workers always speak in a way they understand

30% There are always support workers who can communicate with their family member if he/she does not communicate verbally

50% Support workers always have the right information and skills to meet their family's needs

80% Service providers work together to provide support

80% Services always delivered in a way that is respectful of their family's culture